

Molly's Diary

While Erwin was remodeling an old house that he had purchased, he found a diary written by a girl named Molly. Erwin began to read the diary and learned the story of Molly.

Erwin read about Molly and her mysterious man who she fell in love with while in college. Erwin thought of him as mysterious because Molly never mentioned his last name or anything about his family. The diary was written during World War II and her gentleman went off to war while she was still getting her degree in education.

Molly wanted to become a teacher. She completed her studies, graduating with high honors. She moved to New York State where teachers were in great demand. Molly taught middle school and it was a good start for her. The children liked their new teacher and learned a lot from her. She knew how important it was to be educated. Molly became teacher of the year.

Finally the war ended and Molly got a call from her gentleman to meet and touch base on how they felt about one another. Everything was very much the same as far as the feeling and relationship was concerned. The love was true forever. Richard proposed to Molly and they were married almost immediately.

Her husband, Richard, understood how much she wanted to begin a family. On the honeymoon they were very romantic. They decided not to use any protection. Soon after they got home Molly went to a doctor. She couldn't believe it when he said she was pregnant. She was so thrilled she asked Richard to take her out to dinner to hear some news. She told him what the doctor had said. Richard was amazed that he was going to be a father in nine months!

Molly continued to work as long as possible before delivery. When the date was near, the couple was told they were going to have twins. What a surprise for them! Now they needed to shop for two.

One thing was sure—Molly and Richard had their work cut out for them! The babies needed a lot of care and attention.

When it was time for Molly to go back to work, she had a problem. She loved teaching but she could not bear to leave her babies. Richard understood but they both knew that two children would soon need a larger house and yard. How could they afford all the things they needed if Molly did not work?

They solved the problem by opening a daycare center. That way Molly could still teach children. She could also earn some money to help meet the expenses of the family. Best of all, she could still be with her own twins as they grew.

When Erwin read the diary he admired Molly and Richard for finding a great way to solve their problem. He also enjoyed reading the diary so much that he later wrote a fiction book based on some of the things that he read in the diary. He went on to write other novels and is now a well-known author.
